Interfaith funeral services in Shetland

With over two decades of experience in conducting funeral services, I bring a deeply personal and professional approach to marking the lives of those who have died. Having written and conducted more than 2,000 funeral ceremonies, I understand that each life is unique and deserves a service that truly reflects the individual and their memory.

MY APPROACH

As an interfaith minister, I welcome and respect all faith traditions, belief paths and philosophical approaches to life. Whether your family follows a specific religious path, embraces nature-based spirituality, practices pagan traditions, or holds secular values, I will work closely with you to create a bespoke ceremony that authentically represents the person who has died and provides comfort to those who gather to remember them.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

My diverse career has equipped me with the skills and sensitivity needed for this work:

- Scientist: bringing analytical thinking and attention to detail
- Church minister: providing spiritual guidance and pastoral care
- Healthcare chaplain: offering comfort in times of loss and grief
- Educator: communicating with clarity and compassion

Currently serving as a part-time educator with NHS Education for Scotland, I returned to my maternal home of Shetland in early 2025 bringing my experience and commitment to serving this community.
